YOUR VISIT TO THE BIG COUNTRY

This is Wyoming. This is country of endless beauty, an infinite variety of attractions and activities, through all the year.

Wyoming is the stage upon which the history of the West was actually enacted for the first time without the benefit of rehearsal. Without the dangers but with the romance still here, many parts of the original production are re-enacted every year. This is for your joy and enchantment, and, oddly enough, the greater part of all the props have suffered little with a century of use. We still have the breath-taking backdrop of towering mountains, with the same sweep of open plains and prairie at their feet, where cattle and sheep now graze with the deer and antelope.

As you visit our Wyoming, you will be greeted with a special kind of hospitality and interest in you, the traveler; a willingness to help you make the most of your stay here.

Despite the vastness of this land and the absence of crowds, you will find all the conveniences of the most densely populated areas: modern hotels, motels, dude ranches and resorts, the finest highways, major railroads, airlines and buslines.

Whatever your interests, we are looking forward to extending to you and yours a grand welcome to Big Wyoming!

Cordially,

THE PEOPLE OF WYOMING

FOUR BIG SEASONS of fun and activities

There is no "special" time to see or visit Wyoming. Every season holds its own special attractions. Summer is the time for rodeos and pageants, for packing, exploring, hiking the high country, dude ranching, fishing, hunting, camping, boating and swimming. Autumn is the time when nature dips into a pallet of golds and browns to paint the mountains and valleys in breath-taking color. Fall, too, is for fishing at its best, as well as big game hunting. Winter brings its own activities and attractions: skiing, skating, cutter racing, ice fishing and special pageants. Spring is awakening time in the Big Country when all the countryside is fresh and shows the promise of summer in the making. Whenever you travel Wyoming, plan to enjoy the special attractions and activities.

Wyoming is the home of the big cowboy—and the scene of the best of the country's rodeos, including the daddy of 'em all, Cheyenne Frontier Days, held the last full week in July.

Fall is a season of breath-taking beauty in the Big Country, when golds and reds cover the countryside, when high country fishing is at its best, when winter and its activities are just around the corner.

THE NATIONAL PARKS

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK

No other place on earth surpasses the Teton Country for sheer majesty of scenery—or the activities to be found there. Indeed, Grand Teton National Park is, in every sense, a vacation paradise for all ages, all incomes. Thrusting skyward to backdrop this country of incredible beauty are the Tetons, a jagged, majestic range of peaks that march above pine-covered mountains and valleys for forty miles. Below the Teton Mountains are Jackson Lake, world famous for fishing and boating, Jenny Grand Teton National Park is a camper's dream, with every type of accommodation and facility available—in unspoiled natural surroundings.

Boating, a favorite at Grand Teton, is outstanding on Jackson Lake. At Colter Bay Marina, several hundred boats are accommodated and fishing is excellent!

Lake, as well as many other lakes and streams equally good for fishing. Every type of accommodation now is available—from the magnificent Jackson Lake Lodge overlooking Jackson Lake to Colter Bay where families may rent completely equipped cabins or tent-cabins for a nominal fee. Grand Teton National Park abounds in every type of game, fully protected in undisturbed surroundings. Fishing is among the country's best. Every provision has been made for comfort, convenience and fun, including commissaries, cafeterias, laundries, camp grounds and trailer parks. Activities include fishing, boating, swimming, horseback riding, mountain climbing (for which classes are held) and theatres. The Park Service conducts regular lectures on wildlife, geology and the history of the Jackson Hole Country. Grand Teton National Park is accessible by automobile, airline, train and bus.

Riverside Geyser is one of nearly 3,000 hot springs and geysers in Yellowstone, truly a great natural wonderland as well as recreation area.

YELLOWSTONE

NATIONAL PARK

Discovered in 1862 by trappers, Yellowstone was designated as the nation's first National Park by President Ulysses S. Grant in 1872. Perhaps the most famed of all national parks today, Yellowstone, in its area of 3,472 square miles, annually plays host to well over a million visitors. In addition to being one of the most spectacular of mountain regions, it is a natural wonderland, the site of nearly 3,000 hot springs and geysers, including the most famous of them all, Old Faithful. Within its boundaries, too, will be found famed Yellowstone Falls (twice the height of Niagara), the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone; Yellowstone Lake, one of America's largest high mountain lakes; endless varieties of big game and rare bird species living in the beautiful, natural surroundings of this great wild life sanctuary.

In Yellowstone Park will be found finest lodge and hotel accommodations as well as camping and trailer sites. Fine surfaced roads permit convenient access to all areas. Regularly scheduled transportation reaches the park daily from principal Wyoming cities.

The Lower Falls of the Yellowstone, seen here from Red Rocks Trail, drop 306 feet, or twice the height of Niagara Falls.

WYOMING'S NATIONAL MONUMENTS

Devils Tower

Devils Tower National Monument, one of the nation's most spectacular phenomena, was established as America's first National Monument in 1906 by President Theodore Roosevelt. Thrusting up some 1280 feet above the Belle Fourche River, it overlooks luxuriant rolling grassland and pine forest. Geologists agree that the rock of Devils Tower was at one time molten and was forced up from deep within the earth about 50 million years ago. Erosion, through the centuries that followed, created the patterns to be found on the Tower today. The Devils Tower area is a great playground of fishing, hunting, boating and camping. It is open year round.

Fort Laramie

Designated a National Monument in 1938 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Fort Laramie stands today as a memorial to the courage of men of the past who stood guard in a new land of opportunity and frequent violence. Originally built as a log stockade in 1834 by veteran fur traders, it was purchased in 1835 by the powerful American Fur Company. In 1841, the company replaced Fort William with a pretentious adobe-walled post officially named Fort John on the Laramie. Fort Laramie served as outpost for Capt. John C. Fremont, who recommended that it be purchased by the United States Government and made an Army post to curb the hostile Indians and protect the wagon trains. Abandoned in April 1890, it was permitted to deteriorate until 1937, at which time the State of Wyoming purchased 214 acres which were given to the Federal Government. The Fort includes the remains of 21 historic structures, several of which have been reconstructed and are now open.

Thermopolis Hot Springs and terraces, one of Wyoming's favorite State Parks, is world famous for its mineral hot springs. It is the site of the Gottsche Rehabilitation Center, famed for its modern facilities.

STATE PARKS OF WYOMING

Throughout the state special effort has been made to preserve areas of unusual scenic, historical or recreational significance. These are the state parks, maintained with camping, picnicking, recreational facilities provided for your comfort, convenience and pleasure.

State Parks throughout Wyoming provide every type of recreation facility, including camping, boating and fishing. Glendo State Park, above, is in southeast Wyoming.

MINERAL AND ROCK COUNTRY

MINERAL AND ROCK COUNTRY

Few places in North America reveal so clearly the creation and evolution of our continent or offer such a treasure-land for prospecting as Wyoming. Great geological formations, many of them close to major highways, tell of the centuries-long upheavals that created this land of never-ending change. Mineral, rock and gem fields of many types are to be found in all parts of the state.

Outstanding Rock and Gem Specimens

Wyoming is the location of a wide variety of rocks and gems. Indeed, each year Wyoming's fields attract enthusiasts, both professional and amateur, from all parts of the world who come to prospect for the outstanding specimens. In areas throughout the state will be found such gems as alabaster, onyx marble, agate and petrified wood, quartz crystals, fossils, jade, chalcedony, garnet, rhodonite, sapphire, gas-troliths, azurite and malachite, blood-stone and ruby. A note of caution: many areas on which specimens are to be found are private property and permission to prospect should be obtained. Collecting specimens is prohibited in National Parks and National Monuments.

"Where to Find" Information

You will find throughout the state a great willingness to help you prospect for gems and stones of Wyoming. Virtually every community has its rock hound club whose members will gladly point the way to deposits in their areas. You may write either the president of the rock hound club in the area you expect to visit or the president of the Wyoming State Gem and Mineral Society, in care of Wyoming Travel Commission, Cheyenne, for locations of stone or gem areas. More comprehensive information on minerals, stones and gems in the state is available from the Geological Survey of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming.

Great Wealth of Minerals and Natural Resources

Wyoming is one of the world's great storehouses with a wealth of minerals ready for industrial development. A few of the more than seventy mineral classifications are: aggregates, anorthosite, bentonite, coal, copper, glass sand, gypsum, iron, phosphate, sodium, sulphur, titanium, trona, uranium, thorium and rare earths. Detailed mineral information is available from the Natural Resource Board, 215 Supreme Court Building, Cheyenne.

FISHING

the Big Country

FISHING The Big Country

Whatever your type of fishing—fly, bait or lure, lake or stream, Trout, Bass or Walleye—Wyoming has it! Here, in fact, there are 20,000 miles of streams and over 5,000 lakes. Fishing is as convenient as your car—or you may explore seldom-fished wilderness areas. Truly, fishing is at its best in the Big Country! (For free fishing booklet, write the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission, Cheyenne, Wyoming.)

HUNTING the Big Country

HUNTING the Big Country

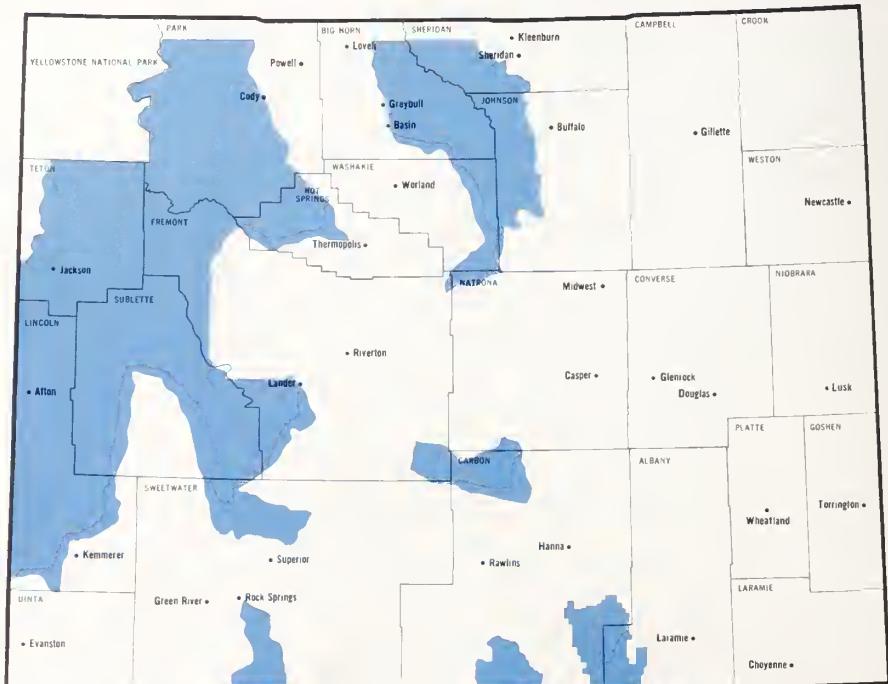

Yes, the big ones are in Wyoming! Indeed, Wyoming is home of the world's largest deer, elk and pronghorn antelope herds. With its great wilderness and plains areas, the Big Country is unmatched for elk, moose, bear and big horn sheep hunting, the best in small game, wing shooting. For wilderness or back country, experienced guides and outfitters are available. For specific information, write the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission, Cheyenne, Wyoming.

CAMPING

the Big Country

Wyoming is Camping Country! Literally hundreds of camp grounds, carefully maintained, provide complete facilities for your comfort and convenience. Good fishing, boating and other activities can be enjoyed. Some areas, today, even provide low-cost cabin and cabin-tent accommodations, showers, cafeterias, commissaries,* in addition to regular facilities. Campers are requested, of course, to respect their camp grounds, to double check for fire hazards, and to leave their area clean—as they would want to find it.
